Facts or Opinions?

Sometimes cognitive distortions can make it hard to tell what is just an opinion and what is fact. Opinions are subjective-there is no way of "proving" or "disproving" them, they simply reflect a preference or a perspective on something. On the other hand, facts are able to be proven or disproven. Facts are right or wrong, no matter who thinks or says them. Test yourself on how well you can differentiate between facts and opinions.
